SUPERVISOR COMMENTS

It was another busy day. Many of the calls we dealt with revolved around mental health issues. Most of those revolved around family disturbances. Officers placed several people on mental health holds. During the day, an officer tried to make a traffic enforcement stop on a vehicle. It appeared that the driver did not want to be stopped, as he made several evasive maneuvers. When he finally did stop, the driver was extremely aggressive and verbally abusing. He refused to produce his id/license when asked, and then demanded a supervisor. It was discovered that he had an active restraining order against him, restraining him from his ex-girlfriend and his daughter. It just so happened that the protected daughter was in his front seat. He was arrested for the violation of the court order, and taken to jail.
